

The Maiden's Heart

The sun was shining against the deep blue ocean with colors of gold. A group of friends had gone sailing and now abandoned their boat at the old dock of an abandoned hospital island to explore the island. Phil, the grandfather, had taken his grandchildren and their friends on a weekend camping trip. The year was 2023, but the island hadn't changed much since the early 1980s. It was getting late and it started to rain. The group looked for shelter, but could only find the abandoned hospital. The hospital was old and rundown, with most of the windows and doors either broken or destroyed, with a few walls that had collapsed. The courtyard was strewn with branches and trash, with a statue of an unknown woman who looks like she is staring at them out of the corner of her eye. There is also an old, rusting vintage police car.

The wind blowing around them told them that a bad storm was brewing on the horizon. The wind whistled through the cracks in the hospital, making groaning and moaning sounds that were horrifying. Seeking shelter, they explored the hospital but soon lost track of grandfather. More groans began coming from the basement, where unbeknownst to them, a demon lived. As they tried to locate their grandfather, they soon came across a dark old laboratory with an old mysterious metal door with strange symbols on it in the far corner. As they explored further, they noticed that the electricity was still running, illuminating the creepy old equipment and stained walls and floor.

They see a medical file on the shelf that catches their attention. It contains medical information about an 11 year old boy with a personality disorder who caused great harm to most of the hospital staff. The doctor's notes at the bottom of the boy's file read, "the experiment was a success and he will be classified henceforth as Fury, the Killer". Just as they read the last word, they heard an intense banging on the door. The door was punctured by a sharp claw, inches away from a teen's face. As the arm retracted, everyone could see the door being ripped from its hinges. The goat-faced demon poked his head through the now open door and began chasing after the teens. The unlucky teen closest to the door was killed first.